

The Cardiff studio of Printing.Com is looking for a senior designer capable of moving into the role of studio manager.

With strong creative ability, an eye for detail, a sound knowledge of design practice, the ideal candidate will be able to show expertise with all the major design packages. They will enjoy paying great attention to detail in all aspects of their work. They will be able and willing to work to deadlines.

Joining the existing small team initially as the senior designer, you will be involved in taking and interpreting creative briefs, allocating, designing and managing many briefs simultaneously, from start to print/web production. You will have the opportunity to work with a wide range of customers and projects – large and small, local & international, developing ideas from brief through to final launch/print stage.

As the senior designer they must be capable of getting the best out of the creative team, while a move into the studio managers role requires good communication and creative team management skills. At a point in your career where you believe you have the skills to lead and motivate, you must be a self-starter who is well organised and hard working. Motivated and conscientious, you enjoy working as part of a team and interacting with clients. An outgoing personality would be an advantage.

Key Requirements:

- Illustrator, InDesign & Photoshop Skills
- Good communication skills both written and verbal
- An ability to work to tight/challenging deadlines
- Good man-management and organisation skills
- An experienced creative thinker
- Enjoys attention to detail in all aspects of their work.

Salary: £22,000 to £24,000.

In addition to the base salary, the studio will operate a performance related profit sharing scheme that can add circa £3 to 5000 pa dependant on the studio's and individuals performance (2014/15 goals) and efforts!

If you are bright, hard working and ambitious with a flair for creativity/design, show us how good your communication skills are and send us that "attention grabbing" CV and covering letter.
